Frequently Asked Questions

What is the England Rugby Advanced Match Official Award?

The England Rugby Advanced Match Official Award has been developed to provide active match officials (whatever their role) with a national training curriculum that will help them to achieve a higher standard within their own officiating.

The programme adds to the suite of official England Rugby Match Officiating qualifications, which currently include:

- Introduction to Refereeing (Level 1)
- England Rugby Refereeing Award (Level 2)

The programme is aimed at active match officials who have completed the England Rugby Referee Award (or equivalent) and wish to develop their skills, knowledge and understanding in relation to officiating Rugby Union. The aim being to develop the individual through these aspects over the period of the programme:

- Core Values
- People Management
- Effective Communication
- Technical Understanding
- Physical Conditioning
- Self-Developer

To develop these aspects, the England Rugby Advanced Match Official Award will cover four components, which are underpinned by an Individual Development Plan. The four components of the programme are:

- Level 3 Match Officiating Qualification – Covering Principles of Refereeing, Core Values, Developing Match Officials, Communication, Game Management, Foul Play, Team of Three, Breakdown, Scrum, Lineout & Maul and Space.
- Sport Science – Covering strength and conditioning, psychology and nutrition.
- Practical Officiating – Regularly performing as a match official either as a referee, assistant referee, Match Official Developer or Performance Reviewer.
- Support – Access to individuals who can provide advice, offer guidance and encourage reflection.

Why has the England Rugby Advanced Match Official Award been developed?

The England Rugby Advanced Match Official Award has been developed to provide:

- An integrated development pathway for all match officials
- National standards & learning curriculum, applied locally
- Support a cohort of highly skilled, motivated match officials to officiate in the adult community 15-a-side game & developmental age grade rugby

Who is the England Rugby Advanced Match Official Award designed for?

The England Rugby Advanced Match Official Award is aimed at those who are actively participating in match officiating who have completed the England Rugby Refereeing Award (or equivalent) and wish to further develop their skills, knowledge and understanding.

How will the England Rugby Advanced Match Official Award be delivered?

The England Rugby Advanced Match Official Award will run with candidates expected to attend four face-to-face contact days, maintain an Individual Development Plan, complete online learning modules, contribute to webinars and to regularly officiate in the 15-a-side game.

The face-to-face sessions will take place during September, November, February and May in the Loughborough area. In between these sessions, candidates are expected to source regular officiating appointments via clubs, referee societies, federations, schools, colleges, universities and other organisations.

Additionally, in between the face-to-face sessions, there will be a series of online learning modules for candidates to complete along with accessing webinar activities and maintaining an Individual Development Plan.

It is the responsibility of the individual candidates to record their learnings in their programme workbook as this will be the main source of evidence in relation to achieving the qualification component of the programme.

Who can apply to be part of the programme?

The England Rugby Advanced Match Official Award is aimed at those actively involved in match officiating (Referees, Assistant Referees, Match Official Developers, Coaches, Performance Reviewers) who have completed the England Rugby Referee Award (or equivalent) and wish to further develop their skills, knowledge and understanding.

No, completing the England Rugby Advanced Match Official Award does not provide a guaranteed place on the RFU NLMOT.

Is this a recognised, accredited qualification?

The qualification component has been developed to sit on the National Qualification Framework and this will be reviewed annually to ensure it meets the appropriate standards.

When are the face-to-face sessions?

The face-to-face sessions are spread over four Sundays throughout the season. The following are the confirmed dates for the ERAMOA 2024/25 face to face sessions.

Day One: Sunday 22nd September 2024 (F2F – Midlands Area)

Day Two: Sunday 24th November 2024 (Online)

Day Three: Sunday 9th February 2025 (F2F – Midlands Area)

Day Four: Sunday 11th May 2025 (F2F – Midlands Area)

What happens if I cannot attend some of the face-to-face sessions?

Unfortunately we are unable to offer additional / catch-up days for the 2024/25 season. If attending the compulsory session is not possible then the Programme Leader will manage any such occurrences on a case-by-case basis.

What happens if I get injured during the programme and cannot actively officiate?

If a candidate becomes unable to actively officiate during the England Rugby Advanced Match Official Award, he/she will still be able to participate in the face-to-face sessions and complete the online learning and webinar components of the programme.

Will the RFU staff help to find appointments for me as part of the programme?

No, the Match Official Development Team will not be responsible for sourcing appointments for candidates participating in the England Rugby Advanced Match Official Award. Appointments should be sourced via local clubs, schools, universities, Referees' Societies, Federations and other appointing organisations.

Does this programme replace existing Referees' Society and Development Squads?

No, the England Rugby Advanced Match Official Award is in addition to any current development squads and is there to complement any such existing training programmes.

Is there a minimum fitness requirement that I need to achieve to be eligible to apply for the programme?

No, the England Rugby Advanced Match Official Award does not have a minimum fitness requirement.

Can I choose my own person to support me through the programme?

Yes, the Match Official Development Team can also assist you to identify a support person for the England Rugby Advanced Match Official Award.

How many places on the programme are there, both regionally and nationally?

During the previous three seasons approximately 95 individuals in total, nationally, were invited to participate in the England Rugby Advanced Match Official Award. For the 2024/25 season we will be running one cohort centrally.

Who selects the candidates from the applicants?

The Match Official Development Team will process the applications in line with the standard processes set out by the RFU Training & Education Team.

If I apply and do not get selected, do I receive detailed feedback, and can I reapply in the future?

No, unsuccessful candidates will not receive detailed individual feedback but will not be prevented from reapplying.

Why is it a programme and not just a course? How does it work?

The England Rugby Advanced Match Official Award provides candidates with an opportunity to develop a broad range of skills, which will need to be demonstrated over a period. Development opportunities continue in between the face-to-face days, with candidates expected to implement their key learnings into their own practical officiating.
